Big, bad storm now in East

By The Associated Press

The East's worst storm of the season dumped nearly 2 feet of snow on parts of the Ohio Valley and into the mid-Atlantic states Sunday.

Where snow wasn't piling up, floods and mudslides wreaked havoc.

At least nine deaths had been blamed on the weather since snow first burst across the Plains on Friday and Saturday. Governors in Kentucky, New Jersey, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware declared a state of emergency declared a state of emergency.

"This is looking like the largest storm this year, and it may be one of the top five in our recorded history," said Lora Rakowski of Maryland's Highway Administration.

New York City may get 15 inches of snow.

Monuments and museums in Washington were closed.

Greg Hannigan of Hagerstown, Md., trekked to church Sunday and found he was the only one there. "When Catholics don't show up for church, you know it's a bad storm," he said.

Some schools won't open today; some will start late.

Governors in Kentucky, New Jersey, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware declared a state of emergency.
Big, bad storm now in East

By The Associated Press

The East's worst storm of the season dumped nearly 2 feet of snow on parts of the Ohio Valley and into the mid-Atlantic states Sunday.

Where snow wasn't piling up, floods and mudslides wreaked havoc.

At least nine deaths had been blamed on the weather since snow first burst across the Plains on Friday and Saturday. Governors in Kentucky, New Jersey, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware declared a state of emergency declared a state of emergency.

"This is looking like the largest storm this year, and it may be one of the top five in our recorded history," said Lora Rakowski of Maryland's Highway Administration.

New York City may get 15 inches of snow.

Monuments and museums in Washington were closed.

Greg Hannigan of Hagerstown, Md., trekked to church Sunday and found he was the only one there. "When Catholics don't show up for church, you know it's a bad storm," he said.