Adobe Dreamweaver Workshop
Dreamweaver
    Allows you to lay things out so you can see them
    Webfix: restore permissions on www folder in Purdue system (everyone has one)
   Patrick's website: www.ics.purdue.edu/~pvogt
        Everyone has a Purdue website like this one, with their individual username
            Free CCS templates
    Quick tip of the day: whenever you type a web address, server is saying "give me index.html": the purpose of "http"
Opening Dreamweaver
    Click on "Dreamweaver Site" (Symbol)
    Site name: My Purdue site
    "Files" on bottom right
        Your site! Anything you do there affects site on the web
    Dreamweaver has two folders
        Local folder where you do everything
        Remote folder on server where you put things on the web
    Must connect to a server: lets Dreamweaver know where your server is Anything you do from here out will update live
    "Design View" to update content
        Can also use "code" or "split" to view code
    Pictures are in images folder
        Must use a replacement image that has same pixel count as the one you have Changing pictures
    Drag bullseye by "source" over to image folder
    Insert: Insert → Image → must be in www folder
Planning ahead
    Sketch out site on paper and know your audience
    Know stuff will stay same, save multiple copies of the page (like navigation bar)
    Find a template you like or create your own from scratch
        Simple as "save" button and you're live on the web
Links
    Type what you will link to in the text box where the link will be
    Highlight what you typed, type in web address in link box at bottom
    To link to Home page, highlight "Home" on navigation bar, drag bullseye over to index.html in "Files" on right hand side

Meeting adjourned: 7:00 pm

Respectfully submitted,
Courtney Elsten
